Dec. 10, 2019 / PRZen / DALLAS -- "The glint of silver from their swords glimmered as they battled." It is a fight to the bitter end as the evil Mouse King and the brave Nutcracker Prince exchange strike-for-strike, blow-for-blow at the home of the Stahlbaums. If you haven't picked up your tickets yet, seats may still be available at your local theatre for The Nutcracker. The magical ballet continues to be a family holiday favorite for its exquisite dancers, elaborate costumes, and, of course, touching performances by its smallest dancers, some as young as six-years-old.

The Battle Scene is one of the ballet's most popular amongst young audience members. Tiny sword-wielding soldiers in red and gold uniforms march across the stage as they fight off the wicked mice. Forget form and technique, it is all about fun as the sound of pitter-patter is heard from little feet running from stage left to stage right. Most young Nutcracker performers start off as soldiers then progress to the more technical roles, such as Party, Mother Ginger, and of course, the role of Clara. At Fossil Mountain Publishing, we believe that "There is no limit to what a person can do that has been inspired by The Arts."

It's that time of year, the season of fairy tales and magic; music and dance. So, bundle up and grab your little ones for an unforgettable evening, including a Snow Queen and the Sugar Plum Fairy, The Nutcracker! Be inspired and ENJOY!

Call the box office, theatre or dance school in your area for tickets now. Evening and matinee performances of The Nutcracker are usually available to accommodate everyone's schedule. Also, check for parking options ahead of time. Thank you for supporting The Arts. Enjoy!
